Hot Job Market for Radiologists

The job market for Radiologists right now in Canada is red hot. Are you currently board certified in Radiology by the American Board of Radiology, theabr.org? Do you have at least two years post board certification experience in Canada? Do you hold Canadian citizenship or landed immigrant status? Are you open to living and working in beautiful Alberta which offers a number of attractive outdoor and lifestyle opportunities?

We would like to talk with you if you answered yes to all of the questions above.

Working as a Radiologist in Canada

Most positions are 35 hours a week with some employers offering part-time roles as well as the potential to invest into and become an active shareholder of privately held clinics. Most positions have no on-call duties.

Some positions have the potential to earn up to CAD$600,000.

What employers typically look for may include, but not be limited to:

- Ability to commit three years;
- Willing to work at least 38 weeks out of the year;
- Proficient in both adult and basic pediatric radiography, including adult GI fluoroscopy;
- Competent in general body, obstetrical, vascular, MSK and breast ultrasounds;
- Skilled in demonstrating an aptitude for basic image guided MSK and spinal procedures to manage pain under both fluoroscopy and ultrasound;
- Experienced in breast imaging and intervention techniques including tomosynthesis and ultrasound guided biopsies;
- Open to learning how to perform DEXA BMD;
- Comfortable working in a clinical setting caring for patients that includes gathering their history, performing physical exams, counselling;
- Prepared to address women's health issues;
- Ready to provide emergency care to unwell patients; and
- Keen on building collegial relationships with other radiologists, staff, referring physicians and patients.

Registration Requirements

Besides being currently certified by the American Board of Radiology it is expected that the successful Physician will also be a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada in Diagnostic Radiology.

It is expected that your training will have included all or most of the following:

- a) Patient care and safety;
- b) Report writing;
- c) Key conditions in early training;
- d) Applied imaging technology;
- e) Radiological anatomy and normal variants;
- f) Pathology;
- g) Abdominal imaging;
- h) Chest imaging;
- i) Neuro imaging;
- j) Head and neck imaging;
- k) Musculoskeletal imaging;
- l) Paediatric imaging;
- m) Breast imaging;
- n) Obstetric and gynaecological imaging; and
- o) Vascular imaging and intervention.

Your non-medical training will hopefully have included the following:

- 1) Team work;
- 2) Communication skills;
- 3) Patient support and advocacy;
- 4) Management and administrative skills;
- 5) Professionalism; and
- 6) Research and education.

Benefits

Most full-time Radiologists who are part of a privately held practice in Canada are eligible for up to 14 weeks' paid vacation plus up to nine paid public holidays. Continuing Medical Education support and allowances tend to be negotiated on a case-by-case basis.

Perhaps one of the top benefits of living and working in Canada are the friendly people with Canada frequently ranked as a highly desirable place to live.

A partial reimbursement of malpractice insurance is often negotiated as part of the package.

Living in Edmonton

As we currently recruit Radiologists primarily for the Edmonton area here is some information for you on what Edmonton has to offer. The Festival City of Canada has a metropolitan population of around 1.3 million and is known as the oil capital of the country situated at around the same latitude of Dublin, Ireland. Edmonton is located in the province of Alberta which offers the lowest taxes in all of Canada. Most people who move to Edmonton are impressed with how friendly the people are.

The Rocky Mountains are available for recreation. Closer to home there are over 97 kilometres of biking, hiking, skiing, walking and snow-shoe trails in the river valley that is home to the longest stretch of connected urban parkland anywhere in North America. With 27,400 acres of parkland Edmonton has the highest area of reserves set aside per resident of all Canada.

The city has a good bus network and a light rail system as well as freeways and major thoroughfares.

The average price of a home in 2016 was $370,000 that compares quite favourably with many other parts of Canada. Their gasoline and fuel prices are the lowest in Canada.

The climate is continental with large, seasonal temperature variations. While some winter months can be cold the average daily maximum temperatures during June, July and August are a pleasant 20 Celsius or 68 Fahrenheit.

Edmonton is mostly a working city with friendly residents where people come to earn a living or for higher learning. If you are a networker and a seeker you will find some excellent opportunities making your settlement go quickly and relatively easily.
